PIONEER COURTHOUSE SQUARE

The Heart of Downtown Since 1984

April 6, 1984

A Square is Born!

1984: TriMet opened its Customer Assistance Office at Pioneer Courthouse Square

1984: J. Seward Johnson's life-size bronze sculpture, Allow Me, is anonymously donated to The City of Portland for display at the Square

2001: Travel Portland opened its Visitor Information Center at the Square

2003: Bronze chessboards, designed by Soderstrom Architects, are added to enhance chess playing at the Square

2004: The Square hosted a record 333 annual programmed event days

2004: The Square was named 4th Best Public Square in the World by New York's Project for Public Spaces

1987: Portland's sculptural Milepost, displaying names of cities near and far, is manufactured in partnership with Portland Public Schools and Powell's Books

2005: The Square was cited as 3rd best Public Square in the United States and Canada by the Project for Public Spaces

1988: Omen Design Group created the Square's innovative Weather Machine consisting of three Portland climate symbols displayed at Noon each day:

HELIA: A stylized sun, for clear sunny days
 BLUE HERON: For the days of drizzle, mist and transitional weather
 DRAGON: Stormy days of heavy rain and wind

2007: Pioneer Courthouse Square became one of the first non-smoking public spaces in the United States

2008: The Square was selected as one of the Great Public Spaces in America by the American Planning Association

2009: The KGW Studio on the Square opens

April 6, 2009

25th Anniversary of Pioneer Courthouse Square

1989: Starbucks opened its Portland flagship store at the Square

2000: Portland celebrated the Millennium with a gathering of more than 50,000

2001: Pioneer Courthouse Square received the 'Great Park Place Award' by the Project for Public Spaces' Urban Parks Institute
